The Google Phone SDK is currently being Beta tested by Google. We are now offering a free preview of this SDK as well as access to a great tutorial for creating phone apps with the SDK. The Google Phone SDK is a free Android SDK that lets you take advantage of all the advantages of Android devices running an Android Operating System 2.0 and higher. Using the Google Phone SDK you can learn the basics of programming a Phone app, App Store apps for your own website, html and canvas based web applications, and even a Game App. Google Phone SDK Tutorials: The first thing you need to do is register with the Google API console. The registration and purchasing process is quick and simple. Once you complete the process you'll be shown the Google Play Developer Console. If you click on the "Sign-In" button you'll be automatically redirected to the Google Phone SDK tutorial where you can get started learning about programming mobile phone apps. Here are some of the videos included in the tutorial: This is a great free way to learn all about the Android platform, it works for those who do not own an Android device, or want to see what it would be like to code an app for an Android device in their own software development framework. If you want to learn more about the Google Phone SDK or begin developing phone apps for the Samsung Instinct you can download the SDK and tutorial for free. This is the answer to the question "how do you create a single bootable usb drive with data you can use on multiple computers with the same OS. This will be a very small guide to installing Ubuntu on your computer without needing to plug it in to your computer. For this purpose I used an old refurbished computer that was one of a batch of computers you can pick up cheap here in Canada. The price tag was only $89.00 CAD. Step 1: Download the Ubuntu image. I will be using the latest version of Ubuntu, which is available on the Ubuntu web page. Click here to visit the Ubuntu website and download the.ISO (Older Version) or.IMG (Latest Version) image you need for this guide. Step 2: Download the UNetbootin software and run it. Unetbootin is a lightweight and easy to use application for installing and making bootable USB drives. Step 3: Select where you want to install
